they have a wonderful amount of vitality, and are exhibiting it in striking and novel ways. Fifty years ago the life of woman was almost entirely domestic and private. They were wives, mothers, daughters, servants. They yisted and received visits. They went to church, and sometimes to concerts and places of amusement. They traveled but little and they wrote less, but took no part in public affairs in any noticeable way. The odium that attached to the few women who took an active part in the anti-slavery movement in the early stages of that historic controversy was the natural expression of the prejudice of society against any departure from the traditional ways and occupations of the sex.

The evolution of society is strikingly shown by the altered position of woman and the enlarged sphere of her activities. She is everywhere. It is easier to designate the few posts she does not occupy than the positions she has gained. Most of the trades and businesses are open to her. It is estimated that over forty thousand women are engaged in different mechanical and increasuile callings in New York city alone. There are more gainst the loss in our schools, and they are confessedly the to-stage. Fifty years ago the life of woman was almost point on Ninth street west distant twenty-five (25) heet north from the southeast corner of mid lot, and running thence north in the line of Ninth street west twenty-five (25) feet; thence west parallel with the north and south lines of said lot. one tundred (100) feet to the rear of said lot; thence south with alf year line twenty-five (25) feet; thence couth with alf year line twenty-five (25) feet; thence couth with alf year line twenty-five (25) feet; thence couth with alf year line twenty-five (25) feet; thence couth with alf year line twenty-five (25) feet; thence couth with alf year line twenty-five (25) feet; thence couth with alf year line twenty-five (25) feet; thence south with alf year line twenty-five (25) feet; thence south with alf year line twenty-five (25) feet; thence were parallel with the next twenty-five (25) feet; thence were parallel with the said located that over forty thousand women are engaged in different meaning the parallel with the said located that over forty thousand women are engaged in different meaning the parallel with the said located that over forty thousand women are engaged in different meaning the parallel with the said located that over forty thousand women are engaged in different meaning the parallel with the said located that over forty thousand women are engaged in different meaning the parallel with the said located that over forty thousand women are engaged in different meaning the parallel with the said located that over forty thousand women are engaged in different meaning the parallel with the paralle pupils. The schools and colleges for girls and pupils. The schools and colleges for girls and young ladies have increased and improved more than for those of the other sex within ten years. More than a dozen colleges have opened their doors and invited young women to share their advantages with young men. Our most popular novelists are women, and nearly as many women as men live by literary labor. Women are among our, most popular readers and lecturers, and a few have won a respectable position in the pulpit. The Departments at Washington are full of women clerks, and in several States women have been elected to places on the school board. In the charities of our time they take a conspicuous and active part, and but for their tireless industry and contagious enthusiasm many of our best charities would fail. They make our hospitals home-like by the taste and tenderness and unwearying patience of devotion, and in medical practice have gained a foothold which promises permanent possession. As teachers they are pre-eminent, and they are the life of the churches and Sunday schools. Clegymen of all denominations confess their dependence upon the women in their congregations for the needed seconding of their efforts. The great revival which is stirring a Western city to its depths is the work of a woman, and the new crusade against intemperance was begun by women, and has won its victories thus far through their prayers and exertions. This wonderful evolution of society deserves study. It means something more than the mere breaking away from established precedents and a time-honored routine. It indicates a new development of humanity under the influence and institutions of our democratic civilization. It would seem that society does not move altogether simultaneously, but half at a time, and the vitality of our age is most strikingly shown in the evolution of the feminine half. It is no irruption of the Amazons, but a new development of the race. Woman must take her place by the side of man, to share his responsibilit
